Gen. Augusto Pinochet Ugarte, 57, commander in chief of the army, became president of the fourman junta and swore in a 15-member cabinet composed mostly of military men. The government replaced that of Marxist President Salvador Allende, who the military said committed suicide during the coup Tuesday.

Allende supporters said in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that an antijunta uprising had begun, but the junta's foreign minister, Gen. Ismael Huerta, said the junta was in full control of the entire country.

In Santiago, the curfew was lifted for 61/2 hours to permit residents to stock up on food and other supplies. The curfew had been so strictly enforced that civilians couldn't leave their homes even to borrow a cup of sugar from next-door neighbors. Crime Said Major City Problem

Norfolk - The assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation told Nebraska League of Municipalities delegates here Thursday that crime and the fear of crime is one of the major challenges facing cities today.

Cox Agrees With Judges

. . . Tapes At Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal appeals court suggested Thursday that President Nixon let special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox listen to White House tape recordings as a possible means of avoiding a judicial-executive branch showdown in the courts.

Cox quickly agreed to follow the proposed com-

The White House had no immediate comment. Nixon so far has refused to let anyone other than some current and former aides hear the tapes of conversations about the Watergate affair.

The appeals court advanced a suggested compromise by which Nixon, his lawyer and Cox meet and decide among themselves what parts of the controversial tapes could be submitted to the Watergate grand jury.

The judges cautioned, however, that their compromise proposal did not hint at what course they might take if forced to rule whether Nixon must give up the tapes for inspection. In an unsigned memorandum, the U.S. Court of Appeals said its compromise would avoid a headto-head clash between the courts and the President. Nixon claims the judges have no jurisdiction in the case. The court said that if its suggested compromise fails, it must attack the issues of the case.

The appeals court said, "It appeared to the court that the issues dividing the parties might be susceptible of resolution by procedures other than those set forth" by U.S. Dist. Judge John J. Sirica. He commanded Nixon to turn over nine Watergaterelated tapes for private inspection in chambers.

Informed of the court's suggestion, Cox said, "I shall, of course, be more than glad to meet with the President of his delegate or any of his attorneys in a sincere effort to pursue the Court of Appeals' suggestion to a mutually satisfactory conclusion."

The circuit court heard arguments Tuesday on challenges to Sirica's order by both the President

The case began when Cox subpoenaed nine recordings of conversations between the President and several of his former top-advisers now implicated in the Watergate investigations.

Nixon claims that the constitutional separation of powers and executive privilege protecting confidential presidential dealings prevent him from disclosing the tapes.

The appeals court in the four-page memorandum noted that Nixon himself directly or indirectly chose Cox as Special Watergate prosecutor and law Prof. Charles Alan Wright as his personal attorney in this case. These facts enhance the possibility of a compromise, the court said.

'We contemplate an examination of the tapes by the chief executive or his delegate, assisted by both his own counsel, Professor Wright, and the special prosecutor, Professor Cox," the court said. That procedure would avoid the presence of a judge and therefore get around the question of court jurisdiction over the chief executive, the judges suggested.

At any rate, the court said, the compromise effort might narrow and clarify the issues to be

The court asked Cox and Wright to notify it by Sept. 20 "whether the approach indicated in this memorandum has been fruitful.

Local Mental Health Center Awarded Grant For Project

By DICK HOLMAN Star Staff Writer

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) has awarded the Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center (LLMHC) $257.-873 in federal funds for the first year of an eight-year project, according to LLMHC director Dr. Charles E. Richardson.

NIMH is part of the federal Health Education & Welfare Department.

Richardson said Thursday the grant represents 75% of the total funding for the project to expand staffing and mental health services. Most of the 25% matching state money required has already been allocated, he said.

The center should "provide effective mental health services to all age groups with all problems," Richardson said. LLMHC applied for the grant last February, he said, because "we felt that we did not have this in this community." He said "some real deficits and needs" exist.

The grant was less than the center had originally requested, Richardson said. Thus, center officials are now deciding what areas can be cut.

"Part of the money will go for new programs in the center and part will go to the affiliate agency," the Child Guidance Center,

Further, he explained, there will be "sizeable additions to the staffs of the mental health center and the Child Guidance

Richardson said the center is considering hiring an additional psychiatrist and increasing the staffs of the consultation programs, post-hospitalization care, partial hospitalization programs, the proposed half-way house, research and training, and comprehensive evaluation and treatment for children and NIMH imposed conditions that must be met before the funds can be released.

One condition requires a plan for inpatient and partial hospitalization services for children and adolescents, and how alcoholics and drug addicts who can't afford hospitalization will be served.

Richardson said he believes the funds are "not in jeopardy" because of the conditions. He said LLMHC is setting up meetings with concerned citizens and social agencies to meet the requirements.

The director emphasized that LLMHC is a "state-supported but community-based and community-concerned mental health center," under the direction of the State Department of Public Institutions.

Richardson said he anticipates some budgetary problems "because the grant covers only with funding for expansion of office space and other physical facilities such as the proposed half-way house.

"For many years, mental health has been seen as a state responsibility," Richardson said, with "a reluctance to see it otherwise." There may be some financial squeeze in getting the remainder of the 25% state money, he said. But he noted a reduction in the number of patients in state hospitals has allowed a redistribution of that of money.

Although "we still have to do some scratching," Richardson said the state has increased its fund allocation to Lancaster County, one source of matching money Richardson gave kudos to people who worked on the grant application, including Judge Donald R. Grant, head of LLMHC's citizens steering committee.

The grant writing committee included Dr. Bob Warwick, chairman; Dr. Eldon Heskett, Jacqui Herman, John Baylor, Dr. Ron Love, Child Guidance Center director; Jack O'Shea, Family Service Association director, and Richardson. Richardson said the com-

Sen. Glenn Goodrich of Omaha said the Legislature may be able to "help ease the burden of the power generating industry" by eliminating delays now incurred in the required bidding

And Schmit said the Unicameral "could legislatively remove (some environmental) roadblocks" if necessary.

"We're all for protecting the environment, but only as long as it is realistic," Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora agreed.

But Kremer said the electrical industry may need to consider a reversal of its long-standing pricing policy by charging a higher rate, rather than a lower one, for greater use of electricity.

Johnson told the subcommittee that the energy task force of the Midwestern Governors Conference will discuss the entire issue at a meeting in Lincoln Oct. 15-16. Gov. J. James Exon heads the conference.

Bennet Woman States Position On Beer Issue

A Bennet housewife, Mrs. Evelyn Pump, has disagreed with what she considers the implications of a Lincoln Star story in which she was quoted.

She was reported in The Star as having testified before the Lancaster County board in favor of Sunday off-sale beer in Bennet. She was quoted as having said she was "married to a man who drinks" and that offsale beer in Bennet on Sunday would serve that interest.

She claims that the story implied her husband was a heavy, habitual or problem drinker when such was not the case.

He drinks beer only in the moderate way that it is commonly consumed by countless people, she said, and the Bennet beer issue is nothing more than a question of simple convenience.

Her position, she said, is no different than that of many of the housewives in the area but she claims 'the Star story singled her out in an unfair and embarrassing manner in reporting her comments at the hearing.

Donaldson said Thursday construction is proceeding and should continue on schedule, barring any weather complications. Even so, he noted that sub-contractors B & Z Co., Inc. of San Francisco worked despite Wednesday's rain.

According to NBC Center's second progress report, it takes about 79,000 foot pounds of force to drive the concrete pilings into the ground. More than 400 pilings - each 50 to 58 feet long. 14 inches square and reinforced with steel bars - are being installed.

IN PERSPECTIVE

By William O. Dobler

Considerable thought is being given in various quarters these days to the idea of government financing of elections. This follows, of course, in the wake of the national Watergate affair when an abundance of big money offered a potential for abuse that was seriously utilized

The theory is that without excessive funds, the abuses cannot take place so easily. That may be true but there are probably better ways of meeting the problem. With government financing of campaigns, how would we ever control

If anyone could file for office and get public money for his campaign, it would very likely encourage wholesale efforts toward elective office. Countless numbers of people would undoubtedly put themselves on the ballot for all kinds of reasons, with the thought in mind that they might even luck out and win at the polls.

Widespread participation in politics is a worthy thing but too many candidates for office could be as big a problem as too few candidates. Great numbers of candidates make understanding of any of them difficult on the part of voters.

Additionally, publicly financed campaigns would in themselves be another area of possible abuse. There is no more assurance of integrity in public financing than there is in the present method of private financing.

Also, there is a value in the present system, despite the fact that it is too often abused. Contributing to politics does stimulate an interest in the system and you have to have widespread citizen interest if that system is to work effec-

We would not really want to discourage the individual, the corporation, the labor union and others from having a financial interest in the elective process. The key to the thing, we think, lies in the amount of such contributions and in their disclosure — disclosure both as to source and to use.

We are not prepared to say what ought to be the limit of contributions per single source but we do believe it is wrong for giant corporations and organizations to make the substantial kinds of contributions many now do. Additionally, we believe that the totals now being spent in the average campaign for public office are too high.

There needs to be a limit both on the amount of individual contributions and the amount that can be spent in any single campaign. That, to us, is not at all the complicated thing that public bodies seem to be making of it. It ought to be relatively easy to fix such limits and to provide sufficient penalties for violation to make the limits meaningful.

There needs to be, also, a system of full and complete disclosure of all campaign receipts and expenditures, again backed up by law with teeth in it. We should eliminate once and for all the many loopholes that are now commonly used to hide contributions and expenditures.

And when we speak of firm penalties and laws with teeth in them, that is exactly what we mean. We mean such things as stiff fines and prison terms for violations, the kind of thing that makes cheating too much of a risk to take.

And that, too, ought to be an easy and simple thing to achieve, far easier than setting up a system of public financing. We believe that politicians who haggle this issue to the point where nothing gets done are simply not interested in manner in which that change was effected the bigger it gets, the less effective it becomes. The U.N. is it's headed in that direction. to influence public opinion. Despite its diminished prestige, the world organization still attracts new applicants for membership. When the General Assembly reconvenes on Sept. 18, it is expected to vote in three new member states - East and West Germany, and the Bahamas. That would bring the U.N.'s total membership to 135.

In years past, the question of admitting both Germanys to the United Nations would have can play a useful and active role? provoked heated debate and dominated front-page news for days on end. But hardly anyone noticed or cared when the Security Council voted unanimously, last June 22, to approve the applications of both states. The only complaint was registered by Guinea, whose council representative accused West German technicians of "sabotaging" her country's economy.

Although June 22 marked the 32nd anniversary of Nazi Germany's invasion of Russia, the Soviet representative cast his affirmative vote without a murmur of protest. Jacob A. Malik, sitting as council president, said: "The stifling atmosphere of the times of the cold war has been exchanged, not without difficulty, for a breathable climate.'

Malik went on to mention the visit to the United States of Soviet Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, the improved relations between Eastern and Western Europe, and world disarmament talks. "All these," he declared, "are important links in the noble effort of our people and government for easing tension and establishing a lasting peace." The U.N.'s size makes agreement on any substantive matter increasingly difficult. Most of the members admitted since 1960 have been "mini-states" like Bhutan, Fiji, Gambia, Maldive Islands, and Trinidad and Tobago. Admission of the Bahamas will swell the total. Each of these poor, tiny countries casts one vote in the General Assembly. When voting as a bloc, they can dominate that body, which is one reason why the United States and the Soviet Union hesitate to air their differences there.

Admission of East and West Germany will alleviate the world organization's perennial financial difficulties. West Germany's share of the U.N. budget is expected to be 6.8% of the total, and East Germany's 1.5%. Their combined contributions will more than offset the scheduled reduction of the United States share from 31.5 to 25%

A Part In The Coup?

The immediate global reaction to the military of socialist and communist parties in other countries to the sorrowful acknowledgment by many western nations that a democratically-elected government had been unseated by undemocratic means to near silence from the United States to a defense of the coup by some right-wing military

On the whole, it is fair to say that most nations lamented the use of strength without reason, to paraphrase the late Salvador Allende.

And through most of the reaction ran the thread of belief that the United States, most probably through the activities of its Central Intelligence Agency, had a hand in deposing the Allende government and imposing military rule on a country that has had a remarkably clean slate in that regard in comparison to her sister countries in

UNL Options Clear

When Jim Zumberge showed up the other day to talk with his faculty, largely about the budget, he made clear enough for all who were listening what is at stake

Much of what he said was aimed at soliciting faculty help in holding down costs, on the one hand, and keeping students from dropping out (or "stopping" out), on the other.

Both of those matters are taking their toll in financial matters at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

"In general," said the notes from which Zumberge spoke, "we are trying to cut costs in areas so as to avoid cuts in faculty and professional personnel."

The "extent to which a declaration of financial exigency can be avoided will depend to a large extent on faculty response to cost-saving programs," said the chancellor

Between the lines, in that statement, is the hint that continuing inflation and loss of income from students may lead one day to a situation of financial exigency under which, faculty members are aware, tenured teachers may be removed.

So Zumberge laid it on the

He said faculty members will be expected to join in the costcutting effort by turning off lights which aren't needed, conserving paper and other supplies, making copies sparing-

He also told them they'd have to become used to colder classrooms and offices this winter, since the heat will be turned down to save on fuel costs, which are bound to go up 50% or more.

* * * What that message meant was

One is that inflationary costs are taking their toll, and somehow the university has got to pay those bills within current resources

MILAN WALL

The order to turn thermostats up in the summer and down in the winter, for example, is saving some $12,000 to $15,000 a

Zumberge is hoping that will save enough to pay this year's heating and air-conditioning bill, which will probably run at least $200,000 more than was

The other half of the message is, in effect, a public relations

'We want to convey the impression that this university is responsible in fiscal affairs," Zumberge told the faculty senate. "That credibility has to be established."

He said he recognizes that many people around the state believe the university is an institution which wastes money.

'We're making it our business to change that." he said. * * *

> Zumberge also told the senate, in no uncertain terms, that he expects faculty members to do whatever they can to make sure that students aren't leaving because they're disappointed with their experiences in the

> Sure, he said, some don't return because they realize a university life isn't for them, or because higher costs of schooling and decreasing financial aid resources are forcing them to stay out to work or take fewer classes so they can work more.

But for those who leave out of disenchantment the university has to do a better job, he said.

And thus he urged the professors to think about improving counseling and office hours. And he said he wondered what had happened to that "great faculty-student alliance" which had armed itself against administrators a few years ago.

Revival of such an alliance might keep more kids on the campus, he seemed to be saying.

He also said, with all candor, that he's more than disturbed whenever he gets a complaint that some professor didn't show up for a class because he was 'attending a meeting' somewhere.

The chancellor said if all a teacher can do is send a secretary to dismiss the class, rather than having a colleague take it for him, then that isn't good enough.

He promised they'd hear about it everytime he gets such a complaint

* * * I'm not sure how the faculty, as a whole, reacted to Zumberge's talk

Many of them would applaud, I'm convinced, since they are as embarrassed by reports of missed classes as is Zumberge.

All of them were sure to get the message about costs either they help cut them or jobs will be in danger.

It should be clear, however, how the world outside the campus will react to such

If Zumberge says the same kind of things when he's talking off the campus, it can only boost the credibility that the

Get Off Those Phones

Foreign Relations Committee seems determined to find out Henry Kissinger's role in wiretapping his own officials and newspaper reporters a few years ago, but less determined to get at the main thing, which is to get hold of this wiretapping mania in the future. Everybody from Kissinger and Attorney General Richardson to President Nixon has said some noble things about the right of privacy and some nasty things about the dangers of tapping people's phones, but these philosophical generalities are not quite good enough.

What we need now is a clear and explicit statement of policy by the administration that it will henceforth not subject its own citizens to unreasonable searches and seizures or tap their telephones without prior judicial approval.

Undoubtedly, cases will arise in the future that would justify the executive in seeking a court order to tap private telephones in the interests of national security, but such an order would be easily available in genuine national security cases. What is pernicious in the present situation is the administration's assertion of its right to wiretap without a court order on its own

WASHINGTON — The Senate judgment that national security questions may be involved. * * *

The administration continues to defend this authority both in its public statements and in various court suits. Contrary to the implications of some of the administration's statements, the Supreme Court has not held that warrantless wiretaps initiated for foreign policy reasons are legal. It has clearly stated that warrantless wiretaps for domestic security reasons are unconstitutional, but it left the constitutionality of warrantless wiretaps for foreign policy reasons open for later resolu-

The Supreme Court decision in United States v. United States District Court (407 U.S. 297 . . . 1972) stated: "We emphasize . . . the scope of our decision . . . This case involves only the domestic aspects of national security. We have not addressed, and express no opinion, as to the issues which may be involved with respect to activities of foreign powers or their agents . . . '

In this context, and given the uncertain legal situation, the

Foreign Relations Committee was undoubtedly justified in trying to get assurances from

Kissinger that he didn't intend to or bugging the National Press Club, but even as secretary of state. Kissinger cannot guarantee the privacy of other people's phones. Other agencies of the government from the FBI and the Secret Service to the Army Signal Corps can do the job; in fact, Kissinger has not even been sure of the security of his own private telephone calls.

Attorney General Richardson, however, could improve the present situation by issuing new regulations or guidelines putting limitations on the executive's use of the wiretap power, particularly the need for a prior court order when U.S. citizens are involved. Better still, the President could add this to the shopping list of legislation he wants from the Congress by the end of November, preferably on Thanksgiving Day.

公 公 公 In his speech to the American Bar Association last month, Richardson made some reassuring remarks:

-"It is imperative - not only morally requisite but practically requisite - that our Democratic rhetorical commitment to fairness-across-the-board be matched by consistent perfor-

-"We cannot allow ourselves to foster or to preserve practices go around tapping his associates which undermine respect for the capacity of the system to treat people - all the people - fairly under law . . . -"Reporters have a primary responsibility to the public, just as we (in justice) do. This responsibility can lead them into controversial situations. But the prosecutorial power of the department should never be used - not even by indirection or innuendo — in a way that could weaken the exercise of the First Amendment rights . . . " These sentiments by the new attorney general have already produced a new spirit and atmosphere at the Justice Department, but as long as other men in the executive branch speak in a different spirit and argue for a continuation of their right to wiretap on their own suspicion or excuse of national security matters, without prior approval of the court, more specific regulations or laws are essential. The administration's excuse for tapping the 17 officials and reporters was that it wanted to "stop the leaks," and nobody can blame officials for trying to secure official lines of communication, but it is not only information but freedom that has been leaking around here, and if Richardson means what he says, the practice will be stopped. (c) New York Times Service

A report released Thursday said 1,896 House and Senate candidates who ran in primary and general elections reported total expenditures of $77,255,078 for the period from April 7 through

Common Cause, a citizens lobby group, said it compiled the figures from the reports required of candidates by the new campaign finance law. They did not include money raised and spent prior to April 7, 1972, when the law went into effect.

The report covers 1,116 candidates in general elections who reported spending $66,405,769 and an additional 780 who lost in primaries after spending $10,-849.309

The 1,010 House and 106 Senate candidates who ran in the general elections reported raising $69.7 million, more than $3 million more than they spent.

About 68 per cent of this money represents gifts from donors who gave more than $100

Of the total raised, $7.4 million represented cash on hand as of April 7, 1972. Of the $62.3 million in new contributions, only $19.6 million, or 32 per cent, represented contributions of $100 or less

Common Cause said $21.7 million, or 35 per cent, came

FTC Tackles Bubble Bath

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Trade Commission, in response to persistent complaints of skin irritation and infections among children, has launched a nationwide investigation of bubble bath.

The FTC investigation, initiated earlier this month, represents a resurgence of concern over a problem originally tackled by the Food and Drug Administration three years ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) - from 41,600 individuals who gave Congressional candidates spent more than $100 each. More than more than $77 million in 1972 half of these gave $500 or more.

Another $16.5 million, or 26 per cent, of the $100-plus gifts came from political and special interest committees.

Another finding was a heavy advantage on the part of incumbents in the ability to raise

The average Democratic House incumbent raised $56,364 while the average Republican challenger could get only $32,-709. The average GOP incumbent got $60.842 and his Democratic challenger $29,000.

In Senate races the average incumbent seeking re-election was able to raise $525,809 and his opponent only $243,070.

In both Senate and House races where there was no incumbent running, Democrats and Republicans were about equal in their ability to raise campaign

'The study also shows that while spending substantial sums does not guarantee victory, it is essential to running a closely contested race," Common Cause

In the 75 per cent of House races in which the winner got 60 per cent of the votes or more, he spent an average of $55,000, far more than his opponent.

But in a study of the close contests the average winner spent $107,378 and the loser $101,166.

In releasing the report, Common Cause chairman John Gardner called for support of pending legislation which would provide government financing of all federal elections.

'Watergate was, among other things, a blockbuster of a scandal in campaign financing," Gardner said. "Watergate may bring many changes, but quite possibly its biggest historical impact will be this - that it demonstrated once and for all the moral bankruptcy of existing campaign financing practices.'

Love: Fuel Oil Rationing Still Being Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) - White President to implement man-House adviser John Love conceded Thursday that the nation may face temporary heating-fuel shortages this winter. But he gave no indication that the Nixon administration will require allocation as a solution.

Love, director of the White House Energy Policy Office, told a Senate subcommittee that the administration is seeking to stimulate the supply of fuel oil, but that allocation is still under

He thus disagreed with a growing number of congressmen who are calling for mandatory allocation before winter sets in.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the most-persistent advocate of mandatory allocation, wrote President Nixon that the nation faces "serious power shortages and blackouts in major metropolitan areas this winter if action is not immediately taken to assist electrical utilities in securing essential fuel supplies.

At a news conference, Jackson released letters from Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and from the chairman of Consolidated Edison, the nation's largest electric utility, urging mandatory allocation.

The Senate twice has passed Jackson's bill requiring the

Bus Called Solution To Transit Problem

By United Press International

The bus, as opposed to rails, emerged from a hearing of the Legislature's Urban Affairs Committee Thursday as the answer to mass transportation problems of the present and immediate future.

"I feel very strongly the bus is the workhorse of our solutions to mass transit problems at least for the next 20 years," Jerry Erdman, representing Omaha's Transportation Authority, said.

"Definitely," responded Sen. Duke Snyder of Omaha, committee chairman, adding that the bus in his opinion is the solution not only for urban areas but for rural as well. Erdman said any mass transit system, in order to meet the needs of the public, must be as flexible as possible.

Discussed was the possibility either on the ground or suspended. Erdman said that approach is premature because costs are at the present prohibitive. Technology, however, may some day provide a solution to that.

Erdman said the idea was looked into by Omaha. It was found a suspended system would cost $100 million per mile, needed 200,000 passengers a day to break even, but could physically handle only 50,000.

As to the need for more and better mass transportation facilities both in urban and rural areas, Snyder said it would grow.

'Gas is more expensive and the cost of operating two vehicles per family is getting prohibitive," he said, not to mention pollution and street congestion problems in of some kind of rail service, metropolitan areas.

Early the morning of Aug. 12, he said, the sewer backed up into the cell and that although guards gave him a mop, they would not furnish him soap and disinfectant.

After cleaning the cell, he said, he was also refused clean clothes and a different mattress. The mattress had been soaked with sewage, according to Farmer claims that he was denied due process because he had not been taken before the disciplinary committee before being sent to solitary confinement His suit asks for a declaratory judgment that his constitutional

Student Aid Plan To Be Drawn Up

By MILAN WALL Star Staff Writer

Representatives of the three public higher education systems in the state Thursday agreed to draw up a proposal for a state financial aid program that would benefit students in both public and private schools.

The decision to appoint a task force to study the issue was made by the Council for the Coordination of Postsecondary Education in Nebraska.

The council is composed of representatives of the University of Nebraska, the State College System and the State Technical-Community Colleges.

'Picture Dim' NU President D. B. Varner, who proposed the study, noted that the "student financial aid picture is becoming increasingly dim. At NU's Lincoln campuses alone, he said, cutbacks in federal financial aid programs have totaled $750,000 this year.

Most other institutions in the state have fewer financial aid funds this year, than last he said, and he noted debate on the matter in Washington has left the national situation at a stalemate.

"Meanwhile, students are in an increasingly difficult position," said Varner, particularly the students who are neither poor enough to qualify for available programs nor rich enough to afford to pay all costs.

"We should look at a student financial aid package" for the state, Varner suggested, "including looking at a financial

Lincoln's chuck-hole problem - the bane of winter and spring motorists - could be solved with the technology that helped send man into space.

Louis Mogavero of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) that NASA is offering the public.

"We try to return to the taxpayer some of his investment in the space and aeronautics program," said Mogavero, deputy director of NASA's technology

He told newsmen that NASA wants to "transfer technology to supply the needs of users - and let the free enterprise system take over."

For example, Mogavero said NASA learned municipalities are looking for a better chuck-hole filler that won't sink or crack. NASA took a thermoplastic used chemically to bind solid rocket propellants, adapted its technology and tested it.

NASA offers the spin-offs to municipalities, industry, business and entrepreneurs for free, Mogavero said; yet he said "we have trouble" convincing them to commercialize the technology for public use

However, great numbers of spin-offs have already been put Mogavero explained that a woman paralyzed from the neck down now operates her arm with very fine movements using a tongue switch. "For the first time in 18 years, she wrote a letter to her daughter," he said.

The switch was adapted from NASA's remote control devices. Eye Switch

Because of tremendous Gforces that pinned astronauts to their seats. NASA developed a light sensor that reflects into the astronauts' eyes and allows them to manipulate controls by mere eye movement.

That same technology, Mogavero said, has been adapted to allow an invalid to guide his wheel chair.

In nonmedical advances, he said, one spin-off allows inexpensive extraction of pure costly metals from abandoned cars. Another rapidly detects drug use through urinalysis, a technique "so finely tuned that it can pick up the causal user once a week," he explained.

For the refrigerator in the home or the refrigerated boxcar, he showed a tiny IWI, an irreversible warning indicator, which indicates by color change if frozen goods have thawed.

The IWI costs two cents in large quantities and six cents in smaller quantities, and can prevent food poisoning, for example, if the power went out while a family was out of town.

Began In 1962 In an address to the Professional Engineers of Nebraska Thursday evening, Mogavero said the technology utilization program began in 1962.

He explained how NASA teams all over the U.S. "seek out technical problems that might lend themselves to solution by adaptations of existing space

"One of the problems we are working on is to effect changes in the NASA patent policy that ought to encourage more businessmen to use technology which is patented," he said. "NASA is now able to accelerate commercial use (of spin-offs) by granting exclusive licenses much earlier than was allowed under the old regulations.'

Mogavero emphasized that all this is not NASA

UNL Official Says Locks Are Changed

James Suter, University of Nebraska-Lincoln omsbudsman, said Thursday that new locks have been installed on his office doors in Burnett Hall on the university campus.

Suter said the locks were installed to protect the confidentiality of materials kept in his offices. In addition, officers with UNL campus police are no longer making routine "checkin" telephone calls from his office after making their rounds in Burnett Hall.

Suter said he had planned to install the locks since he moved into the offices, but said he was moved to act several weeks ago when a campus policeman saw a list of the names of other campus policemen on Suter's desk. The names were those of officers who had complained to Suter about administrative practices in the campus security force. The officer who saw the names was making a routine nighttime check at the time.

House Urged To Speed Up Benefits Hike

Washington (UPI) - House Speaker Carl Albert said Thursday the House should go along with the Senate in speeding up payment of a 5.9% increase in Social Security

However, Albert said the House Ways and Means Committee would have to approve a separate bill on the subject.

Because of House rules, the Oklahoma Democtat said, the House could not simply accept the Senate bill containing the Social Security increase. Any bill affecting the Social Security Trust Fund must come out of the Ways and Means Committee, He said.

Of Housing Authority

Housing Authority members voted to ask the owners of Northwood Terrace, now managed by an insurance firm, to turn the management over to the Housing Authority.

According to Authority Chairman D. G. Alford, the authority has decided not to purchase Northwood Terrace at the present time but will give the matter further consideration in the future.

It was reported that applications for the leased housing program are down below the 700 mark for the first time in several months and that 85 families have moved into Mahoney Manor to date.

It was also reported that sales in Arnold Heights are practically nonexistent because of the difficulty in obtaining financing.

Fashion, auction, charity, entertainment and spirits will be combined to create the "Faces of 73," the 10th edition of the Lincoln General Hospital Auxiliary's annual style show, to be held at Pershing Auditorium 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 28.

For the first time, fashions will be combined with an auction at the annual gala.

Such offerings as a velvet sofa, thrill package, riverboat party, crystal chandelier, house cleaning service birthday party, travel, sky diving lessons, groceries and even a dude ranch vacation will be put on the auction block.

Daughter Says No To Marriage

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with a wonderful man who's been talking marriage. The problem is his 38-year-old daughter. She's never been married and lives with him. Her mother died 15 years ago, and she isn't interested in dating or going anywhere except with her father. This daughter has never earned a dollar in her life. She keeps telling her father he's too old to marry again (he most certainly is NOT!) and he's taken her to Europe, South America, to the Orient; name it and they've been there. He is such a dear and generous man, he doesn't want to hurt his daughter, but he says he loves me, and if I'll just be patient, in time his daughter will eventually come around to accepting me.

I want to marry this man, but I'm afraid it's hopeless. What do you think?

GIVING UP

DEAR GIVING: It's hopeless, unless Father tells Daughter that it's important for her to start making a life of her own because he's not going to be around forever. Unless I miss my guess, Daughter might need some psychological surgery to separate her from her father. Unless Father is willing to go along with the above-mentioned suggestion, forget him. "Time" accomplishes nothing. People do.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 28-yearold adult who writes like an 8year-old child. As you can see, my penmanship is horrid! My husband is so embarrassed, he doesn't want me to address our Christmas cards. I try to slow down and write very carefully, but I find myself grasping the pen so hard my fingers ache.

I realize this is something that should have been corrected during my first few years in school, but unfortunately it

1. To give yourself the best chance, allow for the possibility of either opponent's having four diamonds to the jack. Play the ten of hearts on the ace, cash the king of hearts, king of spades and ace of diamonds, nine of hearts.

Next cash the queen of hearts and ace of spades, discarding the K-Q of diamonds from dummy! Then play the ten of diamonds to force out the jack, and this will be your only loser.

If the diamonds are divided 3-2, this method of play will cost you a trick worth 30 points, but if they are divided 4-1, you will be some 1,000 or 1,500 points depending richer, vulnerability.

2. Win the club with the queen and cash the ace. If everyone follows suit cash the king, hoping for a 3-3 division that would give you the ninth trick.

If the clubs prove to be divided 4-2 (or 5-1), play a low spade, also playing low from dummy! Win the heart or diamond return and play a low spade to the ace. Assuming nothing of interest occurs, lead a low spade towards the Q-8.

This line of play will make the contract if: 1. the clubs are divided 3-3; 2. either opponent has the singleton king of spades; 3. either opponent has the doubleton king of spades; 4. the spades are divided 3-3; 5. South has any number of spades including the king.

Note that the low spade play from dummy the first time the suit is led covers the case where North has K-x, which you wouldn't know about if you started the suit by playing the ace and another spade. This maneuver greatly enhances your chances of making the contract. (c) King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Ex-Prisoner Could Enter Governor Race

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Atty. Gen. David Norvell says former Vietnam prisoner of war James Hughes is eligible to run for governor.

Norvell's formal opinion declared a proxy voter registration of Hughes while he was a POW for nearly six years is valid. Norvell said Hughes "therefore is competent and qualified to seek nomination in the Republican primary for governor next year.'

Norvell said an old law allowing family members to register members of the U.S. military to vote was still in effect when Darthy Hughes registered her husband in Santa Fe County on Nov. 15, 1967.

Hughes, who asked for the opinion, has not said if he would seek public office.

Kreuscher told the local board, "There is no question about the merit of making utmost use of local-state food inspectors, but cities must meet acceptable standards to qualify for the new plan that will be offered by the state Oct. 10."

The ag official said several communities have already met the criteria for assuming additional inspection duties under the new plan.

The State Bureau of Dairies and Food will assign two state inspectors to Grand Island to assist in meeting the necessary requirements, Kreuscher told the health board.

Board members had asked for and received Kreuscher's assistance in initiating a plan for state inspectors to work with Grand Island inspectors to acquire unity for the two inspection programs.

Some Friendly (?) Suggestions

Whoever the fellow was who coined the phrase in reference to sporting events of "It's only a game," obviously had never met a Nebraska football fan.

Many of them obviously would rather have a call from their banker telling them their checking account was overdrawn than to have someone (me) tell them their Huskers were going to lose.

The forecast here of a 27-21 UCLA victory brought a number of suggestions as to what I ought to do in the One suggested that I remember that "this is Big Red Country." That won't win any prize for originality.

Among the harsher suggestions were those urging my resignation. Others just suggested that I ought to some time attend a Nebraska football practice.

The kindest suggestion came from someone, who obviously knows I have a youngster to feed since while many would prefer I have no job, she only suggested that I trade jobs with the janitor.

I checked that one out and he doesn't want to trade. The most interesting thing is that of some 12 to 15 letters received, only one contained a signature.

The big game in Lincoln this week is the Friday afternoon golf match at Holmes Park between KFOR sporscaster Dick Perry and former State and City Ladies Champion Dorothy Schwartzkopf.

Perry is about to set the Bobby Riggs' movement back between 30 and 35 years. We'll take Dorothy by six strokes. If the match is rained out, it should go into the books as a victory for Perry.

Last week's abbreviated schedule found us going 8-4 for .667. This week:

The Big Eight

COLORADO 24, LSU 21 . . . Many of the Buffs won in the Tiger Pil as sophomores two years ago, so maybe they can help the composure of the new young Buffs such as quarterback Clyde Crutchmer and tailback Billy Waddy.

MISSOURI 27, Mississippi 21 . . . The Rebels lost their No. 1 quarterback last week in beating Villanova and that should be enough to give the Tigers the edge.

OKLAHOMA STATE 35, UT-Arlington 14 . . . The Cowboys will be tough to beat in the early part of the season.

KANSAS 34, Washington State 28 . . . Kansas has been picked seventh in the Big Eight, Washington State third in the Pacific-8, but their lack of depth shouldn't start telling on the Jayhawks this early.

OKLAHOMA 14, Baylor 7 . . . The Sooners offense may not be ready yet, but the defense will be.

FLORIDA 34, Kansas State 7... The beginning of a season that may seem like it's never going to end for the Wildcats.

The Top Ten

SOUTHERN CAL 42, Arkansas 7... Last year, it was considered an upset when the Trojans won. This year, it'll be an upset if the Razorbacks come within four — four touchdowns.

OHIO STATE 28, Minnesota 14 . . . Minnesota is seen by some observers as a darkhorse in the Big 10 this year, but facing Ohio State is a tough way for a young team to have to start the season.

MICHIGAN 35, Iowa 7 . . . It's probably another twoteam race in the Big 10 and Iowa isn't one of the two. ALABAMA 34, California 10 . . . Alabama's Bear Bryant is one of the few old-timers who waves a crying towel, but that means he's probably loaded with talent. PENN STATE 28, Stanford 16 . . . One of the few even halfway decent teams on the Penn State schedule and if you're looking to find an upset, you might pick Stanford.

TENNESSEE 33, Duke 14 . . . Duke is out of its league in more ways than one.

League Commissioner Pete Rozelle informed major television networks Thursday to lift the ban on televising sold-out home games in the wake of Congressional approval of a measure banning blackouts of games sold out 72 hours in advance.

Both the House and the Senate approved the anti-blackout bill Thursday and sent it to President Nixon, who is said to favor such a measure.

NEW YORK (AP) - National Football

Rozelle said earlier in the day he would tell the networks "that we no longer consider them bound by contractual provision with the NFL prohibiting local telecasts of games, providing all seats are sold 72 hours before kickoff."

Rozelle said the NFL intends to adhere "to both the letter and the spirit of this experimental law despite our belief there will be extremely negative results to this legislation." The commissioner enumerated on what he considered possible negative results of the leg-

He said: "We feel that during the period of this experiment, it will be shown that a great number of people who purchase tickets will not go to the stadium."

He added: "The sport has thrived on the crowds. We thinks the sport feeds on the entusiasm of the crowds.'

Rozelle also said too much exposure of the sport could be detrimental "by giving the public too much of our sport." Boxing was heavily exposed on television during the 1950s and many blamed that for the decline of the sport.

Both Rozelle and Dallas Cowboy President Tex Schramm said NFL owners could react to such an "overexposure" possibility by going to a single Game of the Week alternative rather than telecast all games on a regional basis.

"Our new contract starts next year with the networks and if this law becomes permanent Rozelle Informs Networks To Lift TV and it has the effect we expect it to have. I feel the NFL will do whatever is necessary to protect attendance at stadiums," Schramm

> Rozelle said "the Game of the Week concept presently used by the three other major s p o r t s-baseball, basketball and hockey-is a possibility if damage to football is evident."

Football is the only sport operating under national TV contracts. The other three, with the exception of Games of the Week and postseason playoffs, are telecast under agreements between teams and local stations.

In Detroit, a Lions spokesman said Congress would have to define "sellout" before Detroit fans will know if home games will be televised.

'They haven't defined a sellout," Lions spokesman Lyall Smith said. "What is a sellout? Do they mean no empty seats. Or one empty seat . . . or 100 . . . or 3,000.'

He said the Lions always hold 3,000 seats for sale during the week before the game. In most cases, the seats are usually sold and the Lions play before a full house.

Smith added: "Whatever happens, league policy will dominate." Miami attorney Ellis Rubin claimed a hollow triumph in his four-year battle to end local television blackouts when the Miami Dolphins announced they knew of no plans to televise their game against San Francisco Sunday.

The Dolphins said 818 seats still remained unsold 72 hours before game time and club officials said they believed the ducats are unpurchased because of speculation by fans that the game would be shown locally.

The Dolphins had sold all 78,000 season tickets. Remaining tickets for the 80,060-seat Orange Bowl were withheld for game-to-game

Rubin maintained the sale of all tickets

Bolts Trip Links, 6-0

By RANDY YORK

Prep Sports Writer For Lincoln Pius X's football team, Thursday night's dedication ceremony turned into a rite of re-dedication.

The Thunderbolts accomplished their mission of dedicating a 6-0 win over Lincoln High to veteran coach Vince Aldrich, whose team may have played the Links for the last time at Seacrest Field.

The season-opening win may have been for the emotionally charged Aldrich, but the rest of the season has been dedicated to Class B all-stater Artie Aksamit.

The Thunderbolt I-back, who scored the game's only touchdown in the first quarter on a 3-yard run, is expected to be sidelined for the rest of the season after suffering knee cartilage damage early in the second quarter.

Aksamit was taken off the field on a stretcher and to nearby St. Elizabeth Community Health Center where his knee was placed in a cast. Pius X officials said Aksamit would undergo knee surgery Friday morning.

"I guess that's football," said Aldrich, "We've got enough guys on this team to dedicate the rest of the season to him. We'll just have to play a little harder to played much harder than they did against Lincoln High, however. They delivered what Aldrich called their best defensive performance since 1970's state championship team.

And it's reflected in the statistics. Lincoln High netted 55 yards total offense, including only 33 yards on 33 rushing attempts. In the second half, the Links rushed 12 times for one

East, LNE, LSE Play Top Outstate Teams

By RANDY YORK

Prep Sports Writer

Rarely do Lincoln high schools boost each other. But this weekend might be an exception. Capital City football pride is at

What are considered Lincoln's three best teams - East. Northeast and Southeast - are matched with what are considered the top three "outstate" teams in Grand Island, Fremont and North Platte.

A sweep, or even a 2-1 edge, would enhance Lincoln's stock in the Class A ratings, which debut Monday.

East (1-0) entertains Grand Island (1-0) Friday night at Seacrest Field while fellow defending co-state champion Northeast invades defending Big 10 champion Fremont. It's the season opener for both teams.

Saturday marks the start of city favorite Southeast's season. Coach Frank Solich's Knights host North Platte at Seacrest Field, North Platte is on the rebound after last week's decisive loss to East.

East coach Lee Zentic may own an impressive win, but he doesn't sound like it. "We can't do things like we did last week and still beat Grand Island," he

"You can't expect to score 35 points when you fumble eight times," added Zentic, referring to a 35-13 season-opening win at North Platte. "Something like that in our second game could be a catastrophe."

Zentic considers Grand Island 'a strong Trans-Nebraska contender," noting that "they're well-coached, have an excellent kicking game, control the ball on the ground and are tough on defense.'

The Islanders opened last of trying to get rid of first-game week with an impressive 25-0 whitewashing of defending West don't have that luxury, but we Big 10 champion Kearney.

"We need a lot of work," stresses Zentic. "We have to have better passing, a quicker pass rush on defense and a lot better blocking from our offensive backs.'

Northeast coach Bob Els realizes "that Fremont's probably itching to beat a Lincoln team after losing three times last year. But by the same token, we want to show them that Lincoln plays as tough a brand of high school football as there is.'

The last three meetings between Northeast and Fremont have been "real head-knockers," according to Els, whose personal coaching record against Fremont's Jack Bryant is 1-2.

The Rockets lost 12-2 to Fremont's Ritch Bahe and Co. in 1970 and 7-0 in 1971 before registering a 21-6 victory last fall.

Fremont quarterback Kyle Kelly may give the Rockets' secondary its stiffest challenge of the season.

Southeast's Solich is responsible for phase III of Lincoln's weekend prep challenge. He welcomes the opportunity.

"Four weeks is a long time for high school kids to wait for an opener," says Solich. "Our attitude has been good all the way, but our kids have been up and down in practice. They've been good one day, sluggish the next.

"I think North Platte might have been a little embarrassed last week," observes Solich, who doesn't expect it to happen again. "They won't look as bad the rest of the year as they did against East.

"They've had the experience mistakes," said Solich. "We have to start out as if we're playing our second game, too, mentally and physically.'

Solich indicated that Scott Whitcomb has emerged into a likely 2-way starter at split end and defensive back. The nonletterman senior earned a starting offensive assignment over a more experienced Rick Reynolds.

Virgil Horne, supervisor of student activities for the Lincoln public schools, said Wednesday that problems caused by street construction near East High" is likely to congest traffic considerably.'

Therefore, he added, fans who plan to attend Friday and Saturday night games at Seacrest Field are urged "to come at least 15 minutes earlier than usual to alleviate the confusion."

He recommends fans take either a South St. route to 70th St. and 70th north to A or taking O St. to 84th St. and 84th to A, then west to the stadium.

Horne said that cars parked on the west side of the stadium will be directed to exit west on A, then south on 70th. Vehicles parked on the east side will exit east on A, then either direction on 84th.

Pep Talk

No pep talk was needed prior to last Saturday's UCLA game to get his team ready to play, but Nebraska head coach 'Tom Osborne delivered a mild one after Thursday's practice ses-

"I talked to them a little tonight," Osborne said after a brief meeting with his squad at the end of Memorial Stadium. "We didn't have a good practice.

"We didn't seem to be concentrating on what we were trying to do and our offense was making some mistakes that were just a result of carelessness. "I hope they come back tomorrow (Friday) and have a good scrimmage. The Husker coach pointed out that pep talks have rarely been used in recent years at Nebraska, either before a game or at halftime. "We've just never done much of that," he said. "If you're not getting a good effort, you might have to talk a little sternly at halftime "But if things aren't going well and it's because of something other than a lack of effort, you spend your time trying to iron out the mistakes. A pep talk doesn't do any good unless there's a lack of effort." The primary purpose of the Friday afternoon scrimmage will look against North Carolina State formations, both offensively and defensively. "It will give us a good opportunity to see how our offense does against North Carolina State's defensive formations,' Osborne pointed out. "Most of the time the first time you get a chance to check that is in the game on Saturday afternoon.' The scrimmage was made possible this time by the open date Saturday before meeting North Carolina State on Sept. 22. Osborne said scrimmages would not be held once his Huskers begin playing every week. "While the scrimmage will give us a chance to check our offense against North Carolina

State's defenses, it also will give us a chance to check out our defense against North Carolina State's offensive plays," he noted. Another reason for the scrimmage, Osborne said, is that he feels two weeks is too long to go without contact early in the season. "This early in the season, I don't think you can go two weeks without working live on your blocking and tackling fundamentals," he pointed out.

However, the first two Husker units will see only limited action, "about 25 or 30 plays for each unit," he said.

Jets Sign Riggins

New York (UPI) - John Riggins, the most persistent of the many New York Jets holdouts this year and a former Kansas standout, finally agreed to terms Thursday with the National League Club and reportedly came down considerably from his earlier demand for over $100,000.

CAROLYN ROSE WINS DINNER FROM L. A. PITCHER SUTTON

"Carolyn: Just to show you I didn't welch on our bet, your next dinner at The Barn is paid for. Dammitt." It was signed by Don Sutton, pitcher for the Los Angeles

Dodgers. "I bet him on June 30 when we were 11 games behind that we'd catch the Dodgers," said Carolyn. Wednesday night, after the Reds defeated the Dodgers 7-3, she was heading for the Los Angeles clubhouse with a package. "He asked me to get him two Reds' tee shirts for his kids," she said.

LSE Gymnastics Club Rated 'Fairly Strong'

By RANDY YORK Prep Sports Writer

Jon Blocker probably would never make it as a public relations man. But he should get some credit for honesty.

Blocker, the second-year Lincoln Southeast gymnastics coach, seemingly could promote his team's excellent chance of winning a fourth straight state hampionship.

But, instead, Blocker says: "I eel gymnastics in Nebraska this year will be fairly weak." Because of a reduction in talent, Southeast again will be "fairly strong," according to Blocker.

The Knights will miss graduated Gary Jeurink most. He was last year's state allaround champion and also captured individual titles in the long horse and horizontal bar.

The return of senior Larry Gerard not only will ease the loss of Jeurink, but likely will give Southeast another state allaround titlist.

Gerard captured the state still rings championship last fall and also placed third in the horizontal bar. Senior teammate Jim Grant is the state favorite in the side horse. Last year, he finished second in the event, losing the title by only .05 of a point.

Blocker, former Columbus and Nebraska gymnast, believes he has at least four other performers "who should fare well in state competition.'

They include junior all-around lettermen Dan Aylward, Kirk Fridrich and Gary Plouzek and senior trampoline specialist Brian Kimball.

"I'm also looking forward to having Fritz Achen compete for us," says Blocker, pointing out that Achen was the top allaround freshman gymnast in the Capital City last year.

Whereas Grand Island may be Southeast's foremost competition in the Trans-Nebraska Conference, Blocker expects East to challenge the Knights for city honors.

The Spartans will compete under new coach Jim Gottschalk, a South Dakota State graduate who earned his masters degree at Northern Iowa.

Although Gottschalk is reluctant to elaborate about his prospects, he expects high point totals from seniors Steve Bruce and Dave Bowen and juniors Tracy Turner and Dave Dave Bowden (rings, vaulting). Lincoln High coach James Hoyt also has designs on a second place Capital City finish.

'We have a good group of gymnasts and with some hard work should have a good season. We should be in the top five in the state," predicts Hoyt, in his second year as the Links' coach.

His top performers are seniors Steve Lococo (rings), Tim O'Toole (all-around) and John Pace (vaulting, free exercise and trampoline). Lococo finished 10th in the state rings competition last year.

Lincolnite Captures Tourney

North Platte - On a cold and rainy day that only a duck hunter could love, the Nebraska Senior Men's Golf Championships were completed here Wednesday.

Maybe that's why Lincoln's Pete Czura did so well. Czura, who used to be the outdoor writer for the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star, is a duck hunter who likes to play golf.

Czura won the ninth annual event with a 36-hole total of 154 to claim a one-stroke victory over fellow Lincolnite Gene Chadwell and Frank Brudny of Omaha

Czura, now a free-lance outdoor writer who travels the world for a variety of sports magazines, would have had a more comfortable margin except for a triple-bogey seven on the closing hole. He finished with an 80 to go with an opening-day 74.

Czura, 60, wears his silver hair in long locks and has a heavy mustache and goatee. "I'm a middle-aged Polish hippie," he

"I wander all over the world," he added. "I was on a magazine assignment in Africa recently. But I try to play golf whenever I can. In fact, I got in a round or two at the Johannesburg Country Club on this last trip.'

Czura's winning score wasn't the best 36-hole total. That was a 72-76 - 148 turned in by George Strasheim of Norfolk.

But Strasheim isn't old enough to qualify for the overall senior title yet. He's still in the "youngsters" division, a seniors group open to those in the 50-54 age bracket.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
